ENTRY FOR CENTENNIAL PLAY ?

HIGH DRAMA AT PRC: PRESIDENT, TREASURER QUIT

With their well-known flair for theatrics, the scholars of Peter Robinson College last week turned their normally staid election night into a political caper whose dramatic effect has been exceeded only by Diefenbaker's revolting Cabinet (circa 1963) and the Mun-singer Inquiry. Indeed, knowledgeable thespians have suggested that the events of Thursday night past in the PRC Dining Hall were really a carefully-plotted satire on the antics of our honourable MP's in Ottawa. And more adventurous observers suggest that Messrs. Last, Korth, Hobbs et al were not engaged in political discussion, but were actually "roughing out" their version of the Centennial Play.

The "play" threatened to be a theatrical wipe-out, so dull was the script until--up leapt one Robert Chandler, just as the ballots for House Committee Chairman were being distributed. Chandler moved that nominations for this position be re-opened and that the election be postponed until after the Election meeting. Chandler argued that there was nothing in the PRC Constitution which said that a person could not run unless
