Two YS in mixed slate at P.R.; Jenkin easy victor

Michael Jenkin was re-elected with an overwhelming majority on Tuesday to a second term as president of Peter Bobinson College, Jenkin collected more than three times the votes of his closest opponent.

His campaign speech was mainly concerned with the role of the college. He said the constitution needs overhauling and that the problem of who should vote on cabinet has to be resolved. At present committee chairmen are not allowed to vote. Jenkin said, "It is fair to say that not enough people on cabinet vote on issues," and he proposed that a committee be established next year to study what role the college should take. "There is no reason to treat all colleges the same, as the administration now does," he said.

Jim Upton informed everyone present at the speeches Monday night that posters proclaiming Bruce Dyer was running for president on the Y.S. ticket were untrue. He shares the socialist line, more or less. In a booming voice he gave his battle crys: "Power to the Peoplet" He admitted that, "members of my party have been in violent disagreement about my candidacy,"
but he thought this was good since,
"we can do with a little shake-up.
We can prove that dissent in a socialist party can be tolerated." He was all for democratizing student government, announcing that "it is imperative that we destroy and rebuild," and that the "decadent aristocracy must be reduced to the rubble it deserves." While the Young Socialists cringed, Dyer announced

Leary never made his reason for running exactly clear but he was certainly at his mud-slinging best. Bill Summers won the External Affairs post, claiming the need for a non-resident representative, the creation of a post for vice-president, and the need for a student-faculty committee. He opposed the Y.S. committee. He opposed the Y.S. proposal for a Trent Student Union which would have nine rather than the present 45 members of TUCC. He agreed with the issues the Y.S. raised but added he felt their methanism of the proposal for the present standard of the succession of the present standard of the p ods were wrong. Summers claims Congress is incapable of decision-making and that students should de-making and that students should decide on issues by referending.

Les MacDonald and Jim Upton, running on the Y.S. slate, won the positions of internal Affairs and TUCC rep respectively. Both support the Y.S. platform including the proposals of the Emergency Committee for Relevant Student Covernment. MacDonald said, "I'm the one who distributes subversive literature in your mail boxes." Both he and Upton favoured the college seeking a stronger involvement with in the community and society at large.

Although the turn-out for the spec ches was poor, several fourth year students remarked that the quality of candidates seeking positions for the new cabinet was very much better than in the past.

With the position taken by the president on future student government, it should be interesting to see the opposition he faces from the two Young Socialists elected.

"Colleges not relevant to most students now"

Cabinet politics should be con-cerned more with College affairs and less with external politics, Paula Hope, president of Lady Eaton Col-lege Cabinet, said. She expressed great confidence in the college sys-tem at Trent and feels that "colleges are potentially relevant to the lives of the students."

"Unfortunately I feel that the colleges are not relevant to most stu-dents now. But I feel they can be," Paula wants to increase involvement in Lady Eaton College politics by involving her cabinet in current that increased concern in the college has resulted from co-ed residences. She felt that co-ed residences would get rid of the dating system, "Then boys and girls would not have to pair-off to establish a relationship."

"Co-ed residences would ease traditional restraints and stimulate an ease and naturalness in relationship. It would be easier to create a platonic and less sexual contact between the sexes." She continued, "Girls should be regarded as people not just sexual symbols. But even now I don't think every girl at Lady Eaton can exactly be regarded as sexual symbols."

Co-ed living again an issue at Lady Eaton

The issue of converting Lady Eaton into a co-ed college is alive again and this year interest promi-a more positive lookin g into the project if not total success.

At Tuesday night's open college meeting the filled dining hall and the active question period were proof of how much interest the ques-tion is raising.

A panel discussion chaired by out going president Sheila Dohoo and consisting of Paula Hope, the in-coming president and Miss Mary Moison speaking for the change to co-ed and Dr. R.E. March and Joyce Wagland, the present student senator against it. No significant new arguments were expressed, Dr. March did make a plea for more research into the over-all living british at Trent for our own and Dr. Douglas Wright's benefit. Particular concern was expressed over the questionnaire which has been circulated to all members of the college. A heavy return in fa-your of the change is an essential

For teaching not evaluation Nind clamps down on mid-year exams

Dean T. E. W. Nind will circulate a letter to all faculty members ad-vising them to avoid the use of the mid-year test "unless it serves a clear and useful academic role." In other words, if tutors insist on ex ams, they play a teaching rather than evaluating role.

"Many tutors, particularly in the first-year courses, find that a midyear test performs a valuable function in enabling them to assess the progress of the class as a whole and of the individual members of that class, and in giving the students themselves a clear indication of their success in meeting the stand-ards expected in the course," the memo observes.

And Dean Nind goes along with this, but, "It would be unfortunate indeed," the memo warns, "If the mid-year test were to lose its un-doubted value as a teaching device and came to be regarded as an end in itself, or as one of the principal determinants of the final grade determinants of the final grade."

Nind plans to set down several regulations concerning the midyear test, including a rule that it should be held in the regularly-scheduled teaching period and that students should be informed early in the year of the time of the test and its importance.

its importance.

Nind is one of those who is particularly concerned about the plethora of tests held before the last Christmas break. These seemed to contra-dict the Report of the Sub-Com ttee on Grading and Exams, now not even a year old which recommended a clear de-emphasis on exams.

Nind says that his "letter is low key" that he expects the faculty will comply once they realise just what university policy specifies. Nind has already talked to the department chairman all of whom approved the draft of the letter.

Nind admits that he is perplexed that so many members of faculty were so seemingly ignorant of university policy when the Sub-Committee's report and the controversy surrounding it stirred up so much publicity. He conceded that his letter "may not work, it may be necessary" "may not work. It may be necessary to lay down a directive to formalise these guidelines if the same thing happens again next year."

VAN GOGH LECTURE

Dear Arthur:

Earnest, sincere, sympathetic

And as for a Trent Student Union representing me better, I don't see how. How could I elect five people, whom I probably don't know, in any responsible way? I don't relish the thought of sitting theory. If ye to ten boring speeches, through five to ten boring speeches, so I probably wouldn't go. Therefore at the elections all I could do would be eenie-meenie-minie-moe. At least in a college election there is a bet-ter chance of knowing who I'm vot-ing for. Compromise based on Drool seen as likely solution

By Horry Underwood

It is a tricky business to predict what turn the tortuous debate over the future of TUCC will take next,
for the inste of the student politico for the unexpected, absurd and even the macabre cannot be discounted, However, one thing is almost certain;
the debate will end at the next session of Congress, scheduled for next Wednesday evening. Even politicos have to write essays and exams.

It seems likely that a compromise will be worked out based on the DrewYuill-Watkins (Drool) proposal which calls for an Executive made up of the top three members of each cabinet and far more frequent sessions of Congress. The proposal is supported by a number of the 'old guard';
including Alex Petersen and a new convert John Pepall.

Pepall opposed the Drool in past,
seeking instead a student government that if he were to introduce his amendments again at the next ses-without a structure. But he realises that if he were to introduce his amendments again at the next session, another deadlock might result. Rather than risk that he will suggest one or two changes in the Drool amendments, including 'some grammatical corrections,' he said facetiously.

cetiously.

If all the people who supported Pepall's position last time switch with him to the Drool camp, the latter is assured of a faintly easy victory, though few will be compete-ly satisfied with the new structure. The complicating factor is that the composition of this Congress may be substantially different from the last, for in the interim the new binets have taken office.

It does seem certain though that the Young Socialists, who support a student union which would be in-dependent of the colleges, will not be comparable in numbers to the Droof forces. The YS hold three po-sitions at Champlain and two at Ro-brace. The YS binson. The Champiain trio might be able to add a few supporters to that college's delegation. But they would fall far short of the necessary majority.

The Drool forces and the supporters of the Trent Student Union con-cept do not seem to have made many attempts to get together since the last Congress. Then, there appeared to be an attempt to arrange a compro-mise between the two sides, but the attempts collasped, As Pepall commented, 'I don't think there is any way there could be any compromise without fraud, given the principles on which the two are based,'

Troubled skies ahead for some charter flights

Students who are booked in the various private charter flights ad-vertized in the campus may be in for some severe inconveniences, says TUCC Executive chairman, Bob Stephensen, Such flights contravene international air traffic regulations and may be cancelled.

The Toronto Star ran a story

last Saturday about such a hassle. It described a scene of one hundred charter flight passengers who were stranded in London because officials there ran a spot check on the flight. The implication was that a crack-down on offending flights is in the works.

Possible areas of infraction are a requirement that charter groups be recognized six months before take-off. Further, advertizing for flights outside the recognized group is grounds for cancellation, relates the British Telegraph-Weeken d newspaper.

Stephensen says that groups which have advertized about the campus fall into this illegal category. He em-phasizes, however, that AOSC flights organized by TUCC are thoroughly legal because TUCC advertizes only within the university. At enrollment all Trent students are technically mbers of a recognized charter

Information regarding the various private flights have been forwarded by TUCC to AOSC. In turn, AOSC has informed the Air Transport Commission in Ottawa, This commis-sion may stop such flights, says room charges are to be made $100 higher.

The Committee on Colleges' College Fees Subcommittee, who prepared the report recommending the fee increase, felt the rise was virtually inevitable. The main economic problems Trent faces are high interest rates in residence mortgage high maintenance costs (due to the smallness of colleges and the high proportion of single rooms) and the spiralling effect of inflation.

Unless this and other proposed increases are adopted, the university can expect to sustain a deficit of $ 107,000. Even with increases, Trent will suffer a net loss in 1971—72 of $30,000.

Professor H.J. Stanford, chairman of the Senate's committee on scholarshipe and awards, explained "continuing in-course student" as a student who was in the process of taking courses at Trent and who would continue to do so at least during the ensuing year.

Therefore the guidelines would not apply to entrance scholarship candidates or to students intending to transfer to another university in the year following the one in which they qualified for the scholarship.

Professor Stanford told the Senate his committee was aware that outstanding academic achievement by a full-time student in one year in five courses was not africtly comparable to similar achievement by part-time students in the same number of courses over a number of years.

He said the committee would take this situation into account in award-ing scholarships.

Eaton co-ed: discarding the virgin island

There has been a great deal of confusion and perhaps misconcep-tion about the possibility of Lady

tion about the possibility of Lady Paten going co-ed.
The administration and a few of it's student representatives maintain that they are speaking for the majority of the girls when they oppose Eaton going co-ed. One reason given for the many applications to Eaton is because it is a "feminine" island in an ocean of co-educational colleges. This gravely overlooks the fact that at present Lady Eaton is the only place on the Nassau Campus where a girl can legally live. Thus, the only place on the Nassau Campu, where a girl can legally live. Thus, a girl wanting to go to Trent Univer-sity, wanting to live on the beautiful Chonabee and wanting to be near to classes has no alternative but to live in Eaton.
Eaton's problems will not be alleviated by the admission of male members; in fact, these anti-co-eds maintain, the problems will increase. Thirdly, instead of finding an all male or all female college unnatur-al, they quote some un-named phan-tom psychiatrists who say it is healthy for young people at the universi-ty level to spend a few hours a day only with their sexual peer group, i.e. men only with men, women only with wome

On the other hand there are stu-dents, who maintain that all four of the above points are incorrect and that for Eaton to survive as a col-lege and not just a residence, it must go co-ed.

Tuesday night after dinner a meeting was held to discuss the matter.
The results of a questionnaire that was sent to all members of the college will be tabulated. (If you are a member of Eaton fill out the questionnaires as soon as possible and return to Mrs. Campbell.) It appeared that the majority of those present favoured co-education. those present favoured co-education. The greater number of pro co-ed arguments might have been due to shyness on the part of those who dis approved of the change or a fear of being mocked by the fairly articulate women's liberation segment who, unintentionally seemed to be condemning those who disagreed with them. with them.

There were four panel members: On the pro side were Mary Molson and Paula Hope; on the anti side, Dr. R.E. March and Joyce Wag-

From her experience as both stu-deni and administrator, Miss Molson denj and administrator, and sensitive felt strongly that in a co-educational college there is an involvement in school activities and in personal relationships which is not present in a uni-sexual college, She stressed the sense of vitality which existed in co-educational colleges.

Due to her experience working in the admissions office, Miss Molson declared that more girls ask to be placed in a co-ed college. Upon find-ing out that Eaton is only for women, some write and ask her for addresses of co-educational co-ops in Pet-erborough. She added with a sigh, These are the facts, times are Paula Hope enlarged upon Miss Molson's argument with more re-asons for co-ed living. She said that in a co-ed residence there is less stress on dating, and thus less relating to men or women as social and sexual objects. The unnaturalness most young men and women feel is alleviated through the co-ed living which encourages brother-

Both Joyce Wagland and Dr. March felt that girls need to remain in an all female university to avoid domination by male students, Dr. March predicted that if Eaton went co-ed, all the college presidents and senators would be male.

Dr. March's opening remarks were particularly condescending. He told the group what a pleasure it was to speak to such lovicy young ladies and how sorry he would be if this was his last opportunity to do so. His remarks drew an embarasses sil ence which was punctured by a few loud giggles from girls who were pleased with being treated as lovely, yet silly objects. On the whole Dr. March seemed to have underestimated the intelligence or the age of the seemed to have underesti mated the intelligence or the age of the group to which he was speaking. His main argument was that Eaton was a unique institution in Ontario and thus worth preserving. Ho wever during the question period Mr. Bonnycastle pointed out that everything is unique in it's own way and thus uniqueness is not an attribute. attribute.

The only other argument offered by Dr. March was that on the average Eaton residents spend a single ar in residence and this one year he felt was a healthy experience.

'It is good for women to be a part from men so they may strentien themselves.' However, it was pointed out that the soaring divorce rates are caused by basic allenation be-tween the sexes. Girls and boys are separated throughout their youth in social and schol astic activities. social and scholastic activities, Thus by the time they reach university almost all their lives have been ity almost all their lives have been spent in their respective sexual group. When a boy comes from a sister-less home he may enter marriage completely unaware of what it is like to actually live with girls. And the same is true for females,

The final argument raised against LEC becoming co-ed was the noisiness and destructiveness of boys. Two years ago 44 boys lived in the north end of Eaton and apparently were quite irresponsible,

In answer to this charge, Bob Tapscott commented on the socialization process that makes boys vi-olent, destructive, aggressive, and pointed out that living with girls might reduce the rigidity of their social role. He also said that Cham-plain would be considering co-ed plain would be considering co-ed living as soon as the new cabinet comes into office. Should Champ-lain go co-ed, the dilemma of dis-placed female residents would be solved.

Oedipal complex in the works of Herman's Hermits

A Review of The Aesthetics of Rock (Something Else Press).

Initially, this article was to dismittary, was article was to discuss Christian relevance in the old Elvis flick and 78, 'Jailhouse Rock'. However, the appearance of a more suitable topic, and the sheer boredom of the original thesis, has forced a change upon us all, so here instead is a review of Richard Meltzer's The Assthetics of Rech.

The Aesthetics of Rock.

Ultimately, this book is either brillant or incredibly bad. I think it is iant or incredibly bad. I think it is the former most of the time. A few quotes to give you an idea of what it's all about...'Bob Dylan's 'Like a Rolling Stone' represents an at-tempt to free man by rescuing him from meaning, rather than free man heaved, meaning. through meaning..."; "The Angel's 'My Boyfriend's Back' presents the entire panorama of the arrival of Orestes."; "Having sat in as a drummer with the Tuckets, I have come to discover that virtually all Dave Clark Five songs use the same drum pattern..."; and, "Although no empirical comparison is possible, Nietzche's Dionysiac revelry has been utterly surpassed by the rock

'n' roll frenzy...".
So you see it's not exactly hard to read, or even hard to understand (sometimes) but it's sort of vague and overwhelming, simultaneously. Plus, the first three pages are no-thing but the entire lyrics from that great oldie 'Surfin' Bird' by the Trashmen. You know; the one that goes " Papa -oom-mow-ma-mow." Meltzer is a brillant critic and especially when dealing with oldies, (though a lot depends on whether or not you like oldles or not.). At one point, Meltzer suggests that the great Chuck Berry is a superior analogy to Wagner in Nietzchean natural world theory. If you like Chuck Berry (which I think you should), that sort of remark is heartwarming. After years of snob put-downs, Meltzer is providing a philosophical context for rock and roll, and without condescending to it, at the same time. This is the type of reply that was needed when wittless pedants were attacking the music for only having three chords. As if a universally applicable archetype is somehow invalid, just because it gets universally applicable archetype is somehow invalid, just because it gets universally applied. Another nice aspect of the book is that it peters out sometime in 1968, avoiding entirely the new developments in music. Thus, it acquires an in nocence rare in recent writing (Meltzer concentrates more on 'I Want to Hold Your Hand' than 'A Day in the Life', for instance) most of which tends to be victously anti-nostalgiac -only in 1971 could groups dismissed as wornout after about two albums. Those of youwho don't admire the noble achievements of an earlier era should be referred to Robert Christgau's article on Cre edance Clearwater Revival (who sell more records than anybody else) in which he points out that they are Creedance Clearwater Revival (who sell more records than anybody else) in which he points out that they are simply operating out of the tradition of 'Blue Suede Shoes' and 'Rip it Up' rather than (as the Beatles did) 'Long Tall Sally' and 'Great Balls of Fire'. For that matter, the primeval screaming in the John Lennon album may be seen as the art of a post-analysis Little Richard.

The title of this article was suggested by Meltzer's discussion of various recordings so that wonderful fivesome lead by Peter Noone, Meltzer points out that they specialized in re-recording songs originally preformed by 'female groupe'. Thus, 'Pm into Something Good' initially 'an insipid song of the birth of a platonic relationship' (great phrase, by the way) become infinitely Vulgar and Evil, when preformed by Ht, But it's the stuff on 'Henry VIII' that really disturbs the old psyche. Meltzer points out that,

'Herman, singing for Henry, is here a seventeen-vear-old obsessed

'Herman, singing for Henry, is here a seventeen-year-old obsessed with entering into the utterly repittious routine of someone ob-viously old enough to be at least his mother. He has moved from Mrs. Brown's daughter to the equivalent of Mrs. Brown and is an analogue to Oedipus.'

equivalent of Mrs. Brown and is an analogue to Oedipus.'

Now, (to me, anyway) that's a considerably more shocking disclosure than Ernest Jones book about Hamlet's Oedipus Complex, it should be noted, however, that I did not hear Hamlet singing on the radio all the time I was in Grade Eight, so maybe that has something to do with it.

Mind you, folks, this review is being written by someone whose only semi-profound rock-criticism is the feeble observation that 'Tho', she feels she's in a play' she is anyway' (Penny Lane) is the great rock lyric from 1964-69, while 'Are the wait-resses paying the price of their winking?' (Country Girl) is the current champ, Meltzer is an effortless writer (evidently) and that's OK too, since all great art need not be the result of great self-torment.

The book is cohesive in the manner that rock and roll history is cohesive. Thus, Sha-Na -Na took their name from the song 'Get A Job' name from the song ' Get A Job'

by the Silhouettes who took their name from the song 'Silhouettes' by the Rays, who possibly derive from Link Wray and the Raymen. Thus, Meltzer can commence by as-"A-well-s everybodys hear about the bird

Bird bird bird

Bird bird bird
The bird's the word..."
and conclude 337 pages later that due to(such banal) commerciality in rock it may be bringing about
'the end of the world...'the end of the world...'

There are also wonderful pictures scattered throughout the book, Par-ticularly memorable are those of ticularly memorable are those of Tommy James fighting cystic fibrosis and of two members of the 'baffled and baffling Dave Clark Five.

Oh yeah, About "Jailhouse Rock'.

If you want, you can envision Elvis ascoincidentally functioning as the real and false Maria's from 'Metropolis' a film that portrayed Christianity uniting both capitalists and commies. But it's probaby not worth the effort. the effort.

Need for co-ordinator of university arts programmes - Darling

The following is the text of a let-er sent to Tim Turner, President of TUFAC. It is here printed as a com-ment because it bears significantly on the problems of art at Trent. – Ed.

Dear Timothy, I am whole heartedly in favour with any proposal that suggests some sort of artistic co-ordinator be hired either by TUFAC or the university to act as co-ordinator, resource person and advisor for the extra-curricular arts-type groups within Trent.

Theatre Trent most definitely has a need for an individual who would be permanently employed to work with the arts. The larger a group becomes, the more impossible it is to carry out an efficient yearly pro-gram that is consistent with previ-ous policies set-up within the organ-ization and outside of it. The more demands that its student member-ship make upon a group, the more need for an experienced person who understands well not only the lines of communication within the univer-sity, the resources at the university and the policies of the university, but also the problems, dangers and mistakes that are likely to occur in various situations and if certain plans are adorted. ands that its student member various situations and recream plans are adopted.

At present there is no such individual to counter-act the inexperience of our executive and members and I lay most blame for Theatre Trent's problems upon his absence. A counter-solution to the inexperience of the counter-solution to the counter-s ience of each year's new executive is not a bulging referral system of files because for the most part it is not the big things but the little day-to-day activities that eventual-ly result in chaos. However these are so numerous and intricate that no student could find time to write them out in a 'Diary of Advice and them out in a 'Diary of Advice and Warnings' and still pass his year. I am not at all suggesting that the coordinator would need to carry out these activities. By his very presence, he would know of them and certainly be aware of problems that developed. By observation and experience he would know to alter future executives before they made the same errors and created the same problems.

I believe that most of the artstype groups could benefit from this person in this same fashion - some of course more than others, but all to a large degree.

to a large degree.

I feel too that as co-ordinator, he would in particular perform the function of bringing these groups into a closer, working contact with one another. As it is now, organizations are often unaware of the existence of certain others.

Unnecessary, and often conflicting, overlap and duplication of function frequently occur. For example:

tion frequently occur. For example; both Theatre Trent and the cultural committees try to bring in outside theatrical professionals and this year even the English department organized special lectures about theatre. For awhile, in fact, the Lady Eaton Cabinet and Theatre Trent were both working indepen-dent of each other to bring Creation II. The case is the same when both the Radio Service and Theatre Trent make plans for radio drama, Due to lack of co-ordination, mon-one group may have discovered the cheapest place to print tickets or order films, other un-enlightened groups continue to spend exhorbitant prices. Although the art club possesses a silk screen which can produce posters the same day and only charges for materials, organionly charges for materials, organizations still send orders to printers outside of Peterborough, Although Theatre Trent has discovered the uses it can make of the Carpenter's Shop and the Engineering Department, most groups remain unaware that limited use of these facilities is available to student oversitations. is available to student organizations. The proof of how great is the need for a co-ordinator could run on for pages and I haven's even mentioned how other groups could avail them-selves of Theatre Trent's technical department, costumes, experienced make-up personnel, or the multitude of ways that actors could be incorof ways that actors could be incorporated into their programs.

In fact, awareness of the need for co-ordination has lead Audio Visual to hold interviews for employing someone to alert the university to the ways AVRC could serve it. AVRC's recognition that there is a problem is commendable, but I feel their proposal would not sufficiently alleviate the problem faced in other areas of the university. On the other hand, an artistic co-ordinator as is being herein proposed would, by the very nature of Audio Visual, be in close contact with it, be explainings its resources to the arts-type groups etc.

There is a third way in which an artistic co-ordinator would be high-ly effective at Trent University. Theatre Trent has a Theatre Teaching Program, Professionals and experienced people are invited to hold workshops and lectures in the various areas of theatre so that our members and associates can learn to enact their art with greater pro-ficiency. Those investigation, it wolto enact their art with greater proficiency. Upon investigation, it will probably be discovered that many of the arts-type groups have, or wish to have, programs of the same intent. Because such a program has been found in the experience of Theatre Trent to require a great deal of time and effort on the part of its executive, I would suggest that the execution of this program, and others like it, be undertaken by the artistic co-ordinator.
Your comments? And what's the next step to getting this thing on the road?
