Trent Girls: Bovine Perhaps, Not Disgusting
by J. Pepall

Dressed in what they claimed was an unusually undignified fashion, Janet Wooley and Wendy Cuthbertson of Trall recently put up an unsuccessful but spirited defence of the resolution "That Trent girls are undignified." They went down to defeat before the gallant and subtle arguments of Champlain's Colin Wright and David Owen in the Debating Society's first inter-college debate.

As Prime Minister, the member for Wooley presented a forceful definition of disgusting: foul, repulsive, sickening, revolting, loathsome and very disagreeable. These words, she asserted, epitomize Trent girls. The learned and honourable speaker, Mr. John Thorp, himself had so demonstrated in his brilliant article for the Sword.

The member for Owen countered that the epithet horsey and tweedy used in the article were unjustified. Bovine was a more apt description, for tweediness in dress and mentality was distinctly uncommon in Trent girls. He had, indeed, once seen two Trent girls in a row wearing stockings!

A denial of femininity was the charge levied by the member for

Weeks New Editor

On the basis of his experience with Arthur, the Trent Publications Board has chosen Mr. Graham Weeks as the new editor-in-chief of Arthur. Mr. Weeks replaces Mr. Stephen Stohn and his appointment is effective immediately. Mr. Weeks was past desk editor of the Arthur.

Cuthbertson. Trent girls will not enter into stable relationships and they behave in an unladylike fashion; that is, they emasculate Trent males.

Seemingly contradicting his colleague, the member for Wright praised horiness and tweediness. Girls could be divided into muffins, birds, and horses; he preferred horses. Tweed, Harris, Harry, Hairy, his beloved ancestors - it all led to the meat of the Opposition's argument: beauty is in the eye of the beholder. It can even be found in all Trent girls - if you work at it!

In rebuttal, the Prime Minister remained unconvinced: disgusting, too, is in the eye of the beholder. Prof. D'Agati, as senior judge, advised against exaggerated gesturing, calling the member for Wright a "Fledermus". and censuring the member for Cuthbertson for too much bodywork.

Prof. Chambers announced that the opposition had won, a decision with which a majority of the house agreed.

Birth Control Panel Monday

Next Monday at 8:00 PM, the PRC Literary Committee will sponsor a symposium on birth control in the Robinson Dining Hall.

Professor Blackburn, head of the Psychology department, will chair the symposium. Others who have agreed to participate are: Mr. W. C. Grant, a prominent Peterborough lawyer; Dr. William Forster, the psychiatrist at Peterborough Civic Hospital; Dr. M. F. Clarkson, the University Health Service Physician; Miss Janet Wooley, a representative of the viewpoint of women students at Trent; and Mr. Ron Johnson, a representative of the views of men students here. Professor J.C. McDonald of Trent University's Department of Sociology, while not yet directly contacted by Robinson's Literary Committee, has expressed a great deal of interest in the symposium. In addition, a social worker is being sought to sit on the panel.

Each member of the symposium will be asked to give a 5-minute speech indicating his views. The floor will then be thrown open to questions and discussion.

Waiters May Go at PRC

"Unless the new 'staggered' hours for dining prove successful, the College may have to drop the waiters for economic reasons."

This warning from Prof. Chapman came in the midst of last Wednesday's PRC Cabinet meeting - one marked by constant appeals to parliamentary procedure as the members tended to be continuously "out of order."

The dining system, the rice and water dinners, and Mr. Eccles-Theodore's announcement of an upcoming symposium on birth control were among the topics discussed at the shortened session. Many other items on the agenda were tabled, however.
B-B Girls End Losing Streak

Horrors! The Trent girls' basketball team has destroyed its record-breaking five-game losing streak! Last Wednesday night saw the Trent team battle to a glorious tie with Civic Hospital, 17-17.

On baskets by Erica Anderson and Ann Thompson, Trent gained an early lead which lasted through to the third quarter. Some good maneuvering and shooting by Civic whittled down the margin, however, and with sixteen seconds remaining the score stood tied.

Pucksters Dumped on First Try

The University hockey team opened its new season on Friday evening, when they were defeated by York University 6 to 1. The lone Trent goal was scored midway through the first period by Don McNell with Gary James collecting the assist.

The Trent team held the much larger and more aggressive opposition at bay until midway through the second period, when York connected for three fast goals to put the game beyond Trent's reach. Superior conditioning and the fact that this was York's fourth game, contributed greatly to the lopsided score. Given a little more practice the Trent team should fare better.

Faulkner: Viet War Must End

by t lovink

A solution to the war in Vietnam is and must be possible. The Middle East war and the present tension there is a direct result of Russian foreign policy. The political impact of the United Nations ultimately depends on United States and Russian understanding.

These were the main points made by Hugh Faulkner, Peterborough MP, on Monday night at Peter Robinson. The Vietnam war has created "irreconcilable and deep division in American society." The realization of this has meant an anxiety within the United States that the war must come to an end, before the nation really suffers from the war. An end will not come until all bombing of North Vietnam has ceased. But this does not mean withdrawal. The political vacuum and instability resulting from a withdrawal could result in a much more serious situation than presently exists. But an end must come. And perhaps the danger is not all that great. The traditional concept of communism is no longer realistic and we cannot determine what kind of government will result in Vietnam on withdrawal.

Dear Arthur,

There is something amiss at an institution that spends millions of dollars in the construction of a complex of buildings in which there exists as many flaws as there are at Champlain College. It began last year when students found that in order to take a shower it was necessary first to take an impromptu bath in filthy slime. Since then, other problems have arisen such as filthy, stinking washrooms (due to poor ventilation), heating units that don’t work, lighting fixtures that neither stand straight upon the desks nor even give enough light when they do. (The list is inexhaustible.) When one takes into account the colourless, austere, and often depressing environment that the living conditions at this college engender, the problems are magnified.

Something is wrong with an administration that cannot fix the expenditure of a sum, such as has been spent on Champlain College in a more useful manner. The staircase plan is an excellent device for achieving the Trent ideal, but the lack of foresight, the lack of imagination, the seeming lack of thought is nothing short of negligence. Let us hope that the future of colleges on this campus are not so poorly put together.

S. Lorne Bloom

Dear Arthur,

Please thank the administration of Champlain College for procuring screens. They should prove very useful in keeping the snow out of my room.

Mr. Faulkner placed great importance on the major role played by Russian foreign policy in world problems. "Is it not in the Soviet interest that the United States stay in the war?" he asked. U.S. involvement in Vietnam gives Russia a freer and stronger hand in Africa and Latin America, since United States aid to these countries has been drastically cut to pay for the war and attention is so focused on Vietnam. The Soviets, although initially supporting the Zionist cause in 1947, now regard the Arab cause as more useful for promotion of Soviet influence. The Arabs have accepted this support to the point where, as Mr. Faulkner said, "Syria and Algeria are now puppets of the Soviet Union." Russian aid converted Arab hatred of Israel into war.

This attitude of Russia is basic to the political stagnation of the United Nations. As long as the United States and Russia cannot agree on major issues, the United Nations can only serve as a political forum, "where negotiations, with senior men from all nations in one spot, can take place faster and more efficiently." The greatest role of the United Nations must remain in the social and economic field.

Hoot Heats Up by c h a r d e s s

Saturday night the Trent University folklores discovered a formula to make hootenannies "happen" from now on. Take gallons of talent, sprinkle in a bit of old-fashioned ham, and stir rapidly for 2 hours. Result? Continuous fun.

The sound system was good and the variety was great. Only the rather academic atmosphere of the Champlain Lecture Hall prevented the groovy feeling of Toronto's Riverboat and Purple Onion.

Ron Morin, Nigel Russell and Bob? gassed people with their "Hex on Sex". Two-thirds of the "Hobbits", Stan Rogers and Nigel Russell, shook things up with the "Saint James Infirmary Blues," while Chris Ward and his girl impressed with an interesting duet of "Thirsty Boots."

At intermission Sally and his cut-throats were surprisingly good with their rendition of "When the Saints", etc.

Then Ron Tapscott and Peter Cragg did "I've got a mind to give up Living" and "The Garbage Man's Daughter" - their professional instrumentation making up for a certain lack of vocal dexterity. With Lightfoot's "Runway Trilogy", featuring the damn good voice of Stan Rogers, Ron Morin's singing of "I'll be Alright" and Fred Richardson's rendition of "Have some Madeira, my dear" the Hootenanny came to a close.

Let's hope the folklores have made enough "bread" to begin a coffee house.

CUSO DIRECTOR HERE TOMORROW

On Thursday, November 23, 1967, Mr. Jon Church, Director, West Africa Programme of the Canadian University Service Overseas (CUSO) will be paying a visit to Trent University. Mr. Church will be addressing all interested students in the Seminar Room of Peter Robinson College at 7.30 p.m. on Thursday night.

CUSO is an independent voluntary agency that provides technical and professional help to emerging nations requesting aid. The normal term of service overseas is two years! Volunteers are supplied only in response to specific requests from participating governments. There is an overwhelming need for university graduates of all disciplines and it is to be hoped that this might be the first year that Trent supplies CUSO volunteers.
